“DON’T RUSH IT”

TOBY NYGAARD, SMWS MEMBER, UNITED STATES

“Take your time! People new to sampling Scotch need to be introduced to nosing the whisky as part of the experience. Those who are used to having whisky on the rocks or with water also need to be encouraged to try at least a sip neat before adding a drop of water. Encourage a revisit to the nose and delay finishing the whisky for 15-20 minutes or more.”

“GO ONE BY ONE”

GUNTER VAES,
SMWS MEMBER,
BELGIUM

“My advice would be not to pour the whiskies all at once. It helps to keep the crowd focused when you pour them one by one. Also, it’s okay not to know everything – but try to find out the answers to any questions before the next tasting. It gives you a nice ‘follow up’ to start with the next time you get together.”

“GO FOR VARIETY”

OLAF MEIER, SCOTLAND AND GERMANY

“The 12 flavour profiles of the Society’s whiskies are a great help in selecting different styles of whiskies, but you can also choose by different maturations from different kinds of casks. That also gives you different colours from the whisky, and there’s nothing nicer for a feast of the eyes if you have a range of colours in the glasses right at the beginning.”
